Description

When a long area has to be closed off, modular fences become expensive and heavy. One roll of net covers 50 metres, is 1 m high and weighs 4 kg. You carry it under one arm and stretch it along stakes or posts, as far as you need.

What it is used for

- fencing off a building site or a plot being worked on;
- areas being prepared for a site, before the permanent fences arrive;
- marking roadside works over long distances.

Colour

Orange shows up from a distance against soil, grass or snow, so people notice the net before they reach it.

What else you need

The net is fixed to stakes or posts, which you choose for the ground: stakes driven in on soft ground, posts on heavy bases where you cannot drive anything in.

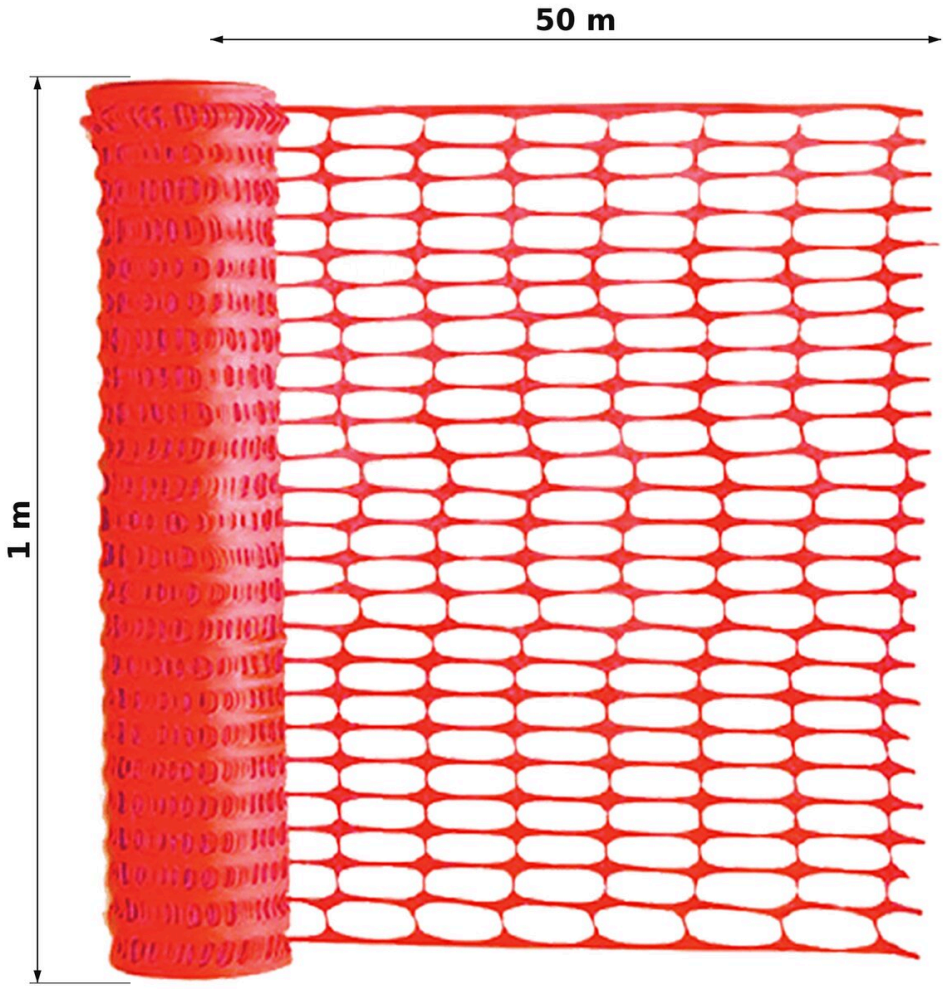

Net or fence?

A net marks and visually closes an area. If you need something that actually stops people getting through, or that carries signs, use the 150 × 100 cm modular barriers.
